Angels and Demons in Christian Theology

The Nature of Angels

In biblical literature, angels are described as messengers of God, often appearing to deliver divine guidance or protection. The Hebrew word malak and the Greek angelos both translate to “messenger.” Angels are generally portrayed as obedient servants who carry out God's will without personal desire or ambition.

The Nature of Demons

Demons, or fallen angels, are typically seen as rebellious spirits that oppose God's plan. They are often associated with temptation, deception, and spiritual oppression. The New Testament recounts Jesus casting out demons, illustrating the power of divine authority over these malevolent forces.

Scriptural Foundations

- Genesis 6:1-4 – Describes the “sons of God” and the “daughters of men,” often interpreted as angels interacting with humanity.
- Luke 10:18 – Jesus says, “I saw Satan fall like lightning from heaven,” indicating the fall of angels.
- Ephesians 6:10-18 – Introduces the “armor of God,” a metaphor for spiritual defense against demonic forces.
